

- I bought some Proven Winner Supertunias, starter plants. I have them growing as bought in my sunroom. When could I transplant them into pots and hanging baskets and put them outside? When would it be safe to do so with regard to the temperature being ok for them?

The rule of thumb to planting petunias has been to wait until the danger of frost is gone and night temperatures are consistently above 50F/10C and the soil warms up (above 60F/15.5C).

However, Proven Winners trials have shown the supertunias are a bit cold hardier so can be started a bit earlier in the spring. That being said, if you have had them inside with very warm conditions acclimating them for a few days can only benefit them.

Sources:

<https://www.provenwinners.com/learn/landscaping/ten-solutions-cool-weather-plantings>

<https://extension.umn.edu/flowers/growing-petunias>